LOCAL NEWS.

Brief Mention.

High water to-day at 9:53 a. m.
Buy a new house—R. E. Baldwin.
Only pure spring water used in Champion's "Foyer."
Mr. Fred Bostwick of this city is to deliver an address at the M. E. church in Bristol this evening.
Ex-Chief of Police J. W. Pond and wife of this city have been the guests of J. W. Clark and family in Terryville the past week.
The Ringling Brothers' circus will appear in this city on July 8 and the popularity of this great show is an assurance of big crowds and unbounded satisfaction.

Grand Master Alling of this city will be entertained by Stephen Terry lodge, I. O. O. F., of Bristol this evening. After lodge a banquet will be served at the Gridley house.

No seats will be reserved for ladies without tickets in Battell chapel on commencement day, Wednesday, June 26. The galleries are reserved for ladies with tickets, and each candidate for a degree is allowed one lady's ticket.

There will be an acrobatic recital at the M. Stetson & Sons company's store, 777 Chapel street, every afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock, to which all are cordially invited. Yesterday afternoon the large hall was filled and all were highly pleased with the excellent recital.

At the Iron moulders' picnic to be held at Lighthouse Point on the Fourth of July there will be a tug-of-war contest between teams from G. F. Warner and Sargent's shops. The Warner team is composed of James Kinsella, Anthony Fox, George Stafford and John Holtz, and the Sargent team of Bart McKenna, Thomas Cummings, Simeon Carney and M. Anderson.

The Methodist Social union, the City Evangelization society and the Methodist Episcopal Minister's association at the First M. E. church last evening held a large and enthusiastic meeting in the interest of the Evangelization society and to commemorate the introduction of Methodism in New Haven. Rev. J. M. King, D. D., of New York city and Rev. C. J. North, presiding elder of the New Haven district, addressed the meeting. There were also several short addresses from other members.

Zola Again Defeated.

Paris, June 20.—The Academie to-day elected Jules Lemaitre, the poet and critic, to membership in succession to Jean Burry, the historian. Jules Delafosse received nine votes and Emile Zola one.

In Honor of Carnot.

Paris, June 20.—The senate voted to adjourn Monday next in honor of the memory of the late President Carnot, and sent wreaths to be placed on his tomb.

Spanish Troops Retired.

Santiago De Cuba, June 20.—A serious encounter between the Spanish troops and a band of insurgents took place near Banes, in the province of Ghabara, to-day. The Spanish troops were unable to hold their position and were compelled to retire with considerable loss.

Denies the Report.

New York, June 20.—John I. Waterbury of the reorganization committee of the United States Cordage company says there is no foundation for the report circulated in Wall-street to-day that he and Mr. Barbour had resigned from the reorganization committee. He says there are no differences of opinion between members of the committee; that the work undertaken is progressing satisfactorily, and that it is the desire of the committee to give security holders fullest information regarding the company's condition.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

It Came Near Lynching a Man in Washington Whose Innocence is Now Made Plain.

[From the San Francisco Examiner.]
Port Townsend, June 1.—Circumstantial evidence came very near causing a man to be lynched and also to be unjustly accused of robbery. That happened nearly thirty years ago on Whidbey Island, a few miles from this city, and it required over a quarter of a century to establish the innocence of the accused. The evidence of the man's guilt was so conclusive that the people of the island seriously considered the advisability of lynching him, inasmuch as he had persistently denied the theft of a dozen witnesses who were positive of his guilt. Finally he was given twenty-four hours to leave the island. He protested his innocence to the last, but he did not lose any time in accepting the invitation.

In the early '60s on Whidbey Island a party of men were at work in a field mowing hay with old-fashioned scythes. A stranger came along seeking work and was given employment. A few hours before a neighbor happened along and paid the overseer, Luke Wright, nine hundred dollars in gold, which was tied up in a buckskin bag and put in a coat pocket. It lacked some time from being the noon hour, and the owner carelessly threw the bag on a bunch of grass. All this was witnessed by at least half a dozen men. In using the scythe the stranger had occasion to remove the garment a few feet and laid it in the stubble. At noon the men knocked off preparatory to going to lunch. The owner picked up the coat and the gold was missing. The most diligent search failed to find its hiding place. Naturally suspicion centered on the stranger, and that soon crystallized into conclusive evidence of guilt. Six men were ready to swear to the facts as stated.

The stranger was told in no unmistakable terms that he would be the guest of honor at a lynching if he did not produce the money. The feeling was very strong, but the advice of cooler heads suggested that there might be a doubt as to the man's guilt, as the money could not be found in his possession. The matter was settled by driving the stranger off the island. No one ever doubted his guilt and many expressed the opinion that after stealing the gold he cached it and at a later date returned for the treasure. That was the way the matter stood for more than thirty years.

The field in which the men worked was filled year after year, and gradually the story of the lost gold assumed the phase of a legend. Not many years ago the farm was purchased by John Gillespie. Like his predecessors he continued to plough the land and sow crops. One day the upturned furrow revealed the presence of two or three twenty dollar gold pieces. A find like that, beating far into the past, in an instant he was down on his knees scratching in the dirt and picking up coin. He found more and more of the double eagles until the amount ran up to seven hundred and sixty dollars. The most diligent search failed to reveal any more hidden wealth.

Then when the story was known the old-timers decided that the gold was found just about the spot where Luke Wright, thirty years before, had lost the bag containing nine hundred dollars. But he and his fellow workers had long since drifted away from the island, and their whereabouts are unknown. But, nevertheless, Gillespie's find has established the innocence of the stranger who was unjustly accused of robbing his employer, and who, had he been arrested, would doubtless have served a term in the penitentiary for larceny.

TOO MANY COUSINS.

Had There Been Fewer Links in the Ostrich's Chain Dinner he Might Have Lived.

[From the Rocky Mountain News.]
One of the family of twelve ostriches attached to Sells's circus, which has been wintering at River Front Park, went to his long home yesterday, a victim of curiosity and a voracious and indiscriminate appetite.

About one o'clock yesterday one of the circus attendants brought a lot of chains and whistletrees from the upper floor and threw them down in front of the ostrich pen. All of the chains were attached to the whistletrees except one, which lay loose among the pile. The attendant left them lying there for a while, and after he had gone away one ostrich, more curious than the others, caught sight of the shining chain. Quick as a flash he darted his long neck through the bars and seized the chain in his bill. He threw it into the enclosure, and his companions stood eyeing him curiously to see what he was going to do with the chain.

They were not left long in doubt. He at once began to make a meal of it. Link by link it disappeared down his elastic oesophagus. It was very evident that the task was no easy one, for before he got it half way down he seemed to repent of his bargain. But he would not give it up, and finally it disappeared altogether. The bird looked around as if in triumph, but his triumph was short lived. In a few moments he was seized with convulsions of pain, and, as all ostriches do when sick, he lay down on his stomach on the floor of the pen and stretched out his neck as far as it would reach. Mr. Sells happened to pass through the animal department and noticed the position of the bird, and at once surmised that he was ill. As the usual troubles from which these birds suffer are indigestion and similar complaints, Mr. Sells gave him the customary remedy—a large dose of castor oil. This, however, had no effect on the bird, which continued to show signs of distress. Nothing that was done gave him any relief, and within a half hour after bolting the chain he turned over on his back and gave his last kick.

Another custom that prevails in circus and menagerie life is to dissect an animal when he dies, to learn the cause of death. Mr. Sells performed the autopsy on the dead bird and discovered that the bird died partly of strangulation and inflammation of the stomach. The chain was found partly in the stomach and partly in the oesophagus, the stomach itself being so distended with freshly eaten alfalfa that it was impossible for the bird to force his novel refreshment into his stomach. Mr.

Sells says that had he been able to swallow the chain completely he might have got away with it without serious inconvenience, although he had some doubts on the subject.

A Wonderful Instrument.

A wonderful instrument is the A. B. Chase piano, with the octavo pedal attachment. It is said to be the greatest improvement in piano in the last twenty five years. Prof. A. T. Wittich and Mr. N. L. Gebhart, direct from the factory, will have these pianos on exhibition for one day only, Friday, June 21st, at N. W. Hine's Music store, No. 706 Chapel street. Teachers of music, musicians and prospective piano purchasers are especially invited, and all others are welcome to witness how octavo playing, echoes, harmonies, pipe, organ, orchestral and other musical effects heretofore unattainable, are now made possible for anyone. Don't forget the time, date and place.
